Kawela's Cave.
(AN OAHUAN TRADITION.)

To H. P.

Kawela was the only daughter of an Oahu chief; she loved and was beloved by Palua, a young chief of Kaula—her father opposed the match, but finally consented that if Palua could find Kawela, he should have her. He hid her in a cave near Kaula. Palua sought unsuccessfully, believing that she was dead, was about to kill himself, but Kawela signaled him with her kapa; he found her, married her, took her to Kaula, and it is believed that they still roam among the streams of that island.

Kawela sat on her giddy seat
Like an eagle poised in air;
She watched the sun's enkindled course
Dilute that cavern bare.
Her red lip quivered as she gazed
On the surf-capped seething wave,
And the deadened hum of its sullen dash
Resounded in her cave.
High towered the giant hills around,
Grim wardens of the isle,
The flowers clung about their brows
With a many-colored smile.
The oo tuned its charming note
Like a fairy o'er the steep,
And warbling echoed back again
The music of the deep.

She watched the edge of the distant blue
That shone in the mid-day glare,
And hope lent form as fancy traced
A speck on the ocean there:
Her heart beat faster as she gazed—
The warm breaths quicker drew—
The bright tear trembled on her cheek
As the dark spot plainer grew.

"He comes," she sighed, "the loved one comes,
To seek his hidden bride;
"Resistless as the ocean wave,
His heart his faithful guide.
"Ye lingering moments, haste ye on—
"Ye feed upon my heart—
"Bring! bring my dear Palua here,
"And then we'll never part.
"I'll weave him garlands rich and rare
"Of the mall's solemn hue;
"And a piece of my heart shall each one bear,
"I'll impart each leaf with a glittering tear
"To charm his love anew."

He sought, the weary day he sought
Each high secluded spot;
His feet grew weary from their toil,
He sought but found her not.
Her father casts a savage glance
At the youth's exhausted frame;
He meets his woe-worn look with scorn,
And taunts him with her name.

His brain grew mad, and to the shore
He rushed in wild despair,
He cried, "you've killed Kawela dear,
"I'll die and meet her there!"
She tore the kapa from her form
As a signal from above;
Had it been her heart's life blood
She'd have shed it for her love.

He climbed the steep, his quivering feet
Sped o'er each dizzy height;
Her sickening brain beheld his speed
And shuddered at the sight.
He clasped her to his panting breast
And kissed her sun-browned brow,
And round Kaula's bright waterfalls
The lovers rambled now.

Honolulu, Nov. 1856.

VARIETY.

Mischief is not found in the tongue, the eyes or the hands, but in the heart.

The pen, in the hand that knows how to use it, is the most powerful weapon known.

The number of Jews is estimated to be about the same that it was when they left Egypt with Moses—about three millions and a half.

He who tells a lie is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain one.—Pop.

Respect for woman, says a Frenchman, requires us never to doubt a word of what she utters; self-respect requires us never to believe a word of what she says.

RAILWAY NEWS.—There is an old lady who says she always likes to travel by a trunk line, because then she feels confidence about the safety of her luggage.—Punch.

It goes a great way towards making a man faithful, to let him understand that you think him so; and he that does not suspect that I will deceive him, gives me a kind of right to cozen him.

A landlady in Philadelphia, it is said, makes her pies so light that her lodgers can see to go to bed without a candle, after eating a moderate sized piece.

THE TWO PICTURES.—"I have subdued the nations of the earth; is there no other world for me to conquer?"—Alexander the Great.

"I have fought the good fight—I have finished my course; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."—St. Paul.

We notice in one of our exchanges the marriage of Mr. John H. Strange, and Miss Elizabeth Strange. It is a little strange, but we think the next event will be a little stranger.

"Davy Jones' Locker" must contain an immense amount of treasure. In 1854, twenty-five millions of dollars were sunk in the ocean; in 1855, which was comparatively free of storms, only fifteen millions—making an average of twenty millions per annum for two years.

Brilliant thoughts are often slow in their formation, like the diamond. Thomas Moore was frequently occupied three weeks in writing a song. Theodore Hook often took about the same time to perpetrate an "impromptu," and Sheridan was frequently employed all day in getting up a joke, which was supposed by some to be the inspiration of the moment.

"Don't Worry."—This is the first thing an editor should get by heart. If Mr. Sloum threatens to withdraw his patronage because you criticized Professor Drawl's lecture on the onion question, don't worry—but tell him to go ahead and do it.

If Mr. Bullion writes you an insulting letter, saying that if you don't stop writing about the Diddle Railroad, he will ruin you with a law suit—don't worry but dare him to try it on.

If Mr. Smith threatens to cave your head in because you mentioned that his son Bob was sent to the Tombs for pelting a street lamp with brickbats—don't worry, but tell him that you so love law, that you dine on salad made of red tape and sealing wax.

Again we say, never worry. If you do, you are no more calculated for an editor than a Quaker is for marine hornpipes.
